Getting a Start NATHANIEL C. FOWLER WORK.

(Copyright, 1914.)

SOME years ago, in conver-sation with the dean of a great institute of techa man of international reputation as an educator, I asked him what he would say, if he had but a moment at his disposal, and were addressing a convention of young men. Instantly he replied, "Work." In these four letters, W-O-R-K, seems to be contained and summed up all these is for one to do, if he would succeed. No man ever accomplished anything, ever amounted to anything, ever built up a reputation, who did not work, work intelligently, work persistently.

The best of luck and of opportunity are worthless unless work is applied to them.

History fails to record a single instance of any kind of success which was made without work, and everlasting work.
Although ability shows mightily in the result, by itself it is no better than nothing if it is not worked out by work. Opportunity has no value unless work is applied to it.

Ask any man of fame or of fortune what helped him up the ladder of accomplishment, and he will say,

The opportunity to work is God's great gift to man, to be used by him, if he would succeed. Without work no result is possible. With work no man knows the limit

I am aware that many a man has worked hard and appeared to ac-complish little; but, if he had not worked, he would not have done

Present conditions seem beyond the control of man, and do not, I admit, allow each individual to obtain results equal in value; but, be that as it may, our only hope is in work, for, without it, we amount to nothing, and, with it, we may amount to something.

Laziness is, I believe, the great fundamental cause of failure. It allows one to sit with folded hands waiting for opportunity, and, further, to expect opportunity to produce results.

Opportunity, in itself, never did anything, and is of absolutely no use to anybody, unless it is not only grasped but worked upon.

Every man of mark, whether practicing in the field of labor, business, or profession, would have failed to obtain his position, had he not at the start worked, worked hard, and continued to work during every day of

Things may come to those who wait for them, but they may as well keep away, unless the waiter uses them, works them, and makes the most of them most of them. Discouragement and apparent lack of opportunity are no excuse for

Keep on working when the sun shines and when it rains. Work, and, under the law of averages, you will succeed. Refuse to work, and you are absolutely sure Work makes all things possible. Work makes most things probable. There is no place in the world for the man who will not work. Nobody wants him, and he is of no use to himself. Sooner or later he will join that vast army, most of the members of which are unworthy to receive even the support of the poorhouse.

U. S. League of Building and Loan Associations to Discuss Rural Credits Today.

Delegates from all over the country were present yesterday when the twenty-second annual convention of the United States League of Building and Loan Associations was called to order in the ball room of the Raleigh Hotel.

An address of welcome to the visitors was delivered by Commissioner Siddons, who expressed the hope that the association would farther extend the Torrens system of land title registrations, which ciation would farther extend the Torrens system of land title registrations, which he declared to be far superior to other

This, in addition to loans by State banking institutions, authorized or likely to be authorized to loan on farming lands. He suggested the importance of this subject to building and loan associations, whether from the standard or Federal or State legislaloan associations, whether from the standpoint of Federal or State legisla-tion, and evidently relied upon the league's committee on farm loans to look out for building and loan association in-terests if Congress should seriously take up the matter of loans to farmers under ational regulation

The objects of the suit were turned over to the plaintiff upon his writ of re-plevin by the United States marshal's office after Santiago S. It is said this was done after notice of the intervening petition had been served and that Villareal is unlawfully in possession of the dies. It is likely that an effort will soon be made to compel him to restore them to the cus-tody of the marshal until the rights of the parties are adjudicated.

Treasure Found in San Francisco Mus Pass Out of Family Which Has Held It 120 Years.

San Francisco, July 71.-Drawn in 1792, later destined for a British art gallery but deflected to America, reacued from the San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906, a noted portrait by Romney is about to leave the hands of the fam-ily which has owned the picture for more than 120 years. The portrait is Romney's pastel of Charlotte Smith, one of the earliest women novelists, and one of the first women to earn a substantial ncome by her pen.

The picture was made at the same time as the famous portrait of Cow-per, but, unlike this picture, the companion pastel has never been copied, so that for more than a century this very interesting composition has been prac-tically lost to sight.

Exhibited in 1868.

In 1968 the drawing was shown in the National Portrait Exhibition by its owner at that time, Miss Lucinda Smith, the hovelist's granddaughter. She then expressed her intention of presenting the portrait, along with some Turners, to the Turner Gallery. Later she changed her mind and bequesthed it to her favorlite niece, Madeline Mitchell Lissak, the great-granddaughter of the original Charlotte Smith, who married end set. FRANK A. VANDERLIP

New York, July 27.—Believing that cancer is one of the greatest problems with which the medical profession has to cope, Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank, and known throughout the country, has lent a hand in the founding of a radium institute at which cancer victims may receive free treatment. The Sanatorium, which will be located at Ossining, will be equipped with $30,000 worth of radium.

portrait, along with some Turners, to the Turner Gailery. Later she changed her mind and bequeathed it to her favorite niece, Madeline Mitcheil Lissak, the great-granddaughter of the original Charlotte Smith, who married and settled in San Francisco, following a girlhood in Australia. To San Francisco the picture traveled more than thirty years ago, and it was one of the few rare valuables which were saved from the flames in 1906.

The Lissak home was filled with old furniture, silver and portraits inherited from both sides of the family, and these treasures were the only things thought of when the fire bore down on the house. The father, without providing even a suit of clothes for himself, took the Romney pleture, while the daughters laid hold of some old miniatures, and the antique silver was carried away by a kindly neighbor fortunate enough to have a horse and buggy. For three days father, mother and daughters wandered homeless, carrying their precious family portraits, until friends from a near-by suburb were found.
